The Cincinnati papers mention the arrest in this city of John Craig, who had a quantity of rings in his possession, making it appear that he was a house robber. The simple fact is that the man was arrested some days ago on the charge of drunkenness and was released yesterday by officer Harry Ort, he having served his term in jail. There were no facts to warrant holding him on the charge of robbery.

SMALLPOX QUARANTINE.

Greenup County Might as Well Be Off the Map Altogether.

Under an order of the State Board of Health, a rigid quarantine went into effect in Greenup county at 12 o'clock yesterday noon, Russell being the only point in the county that is excepted.

The order forbids any person to enter or leave, except to pass through, and forbids any railroad, steamboat or other transportation company to make any stops or to deliver any passengers or freight or to from said county, without a permit from the State Board.

This step is taken because of the prevalence of smallpox and the indifference of the civil authorities in that county to the disease.

There will be a change of Managers of the St. Charles Hotel January 1st, Messrs. Hopper & Hunter retiring.

DICK KYLE'S CASE.

An Indictment Against "Champagne Dick" Filed Away.

Prosecutor John C. Schwartz, who is soon to relinquish his office at Cincinnati, a few days ago handed up a large number of old indictments that had been accumulating for twelve years, asking that they be filed away.

One of the most important on the list was that of Dick Kyle, who was known by the sobriquet of "Champagne Dick." He embezzled large sums from the Anderson-Harris Carriage Company, of which he was bookkeeper. His folks paid at least a part of his shortage and he was not prosecuted.

He later failed in business in Chicago, opened a racing book in Canada and is thought to be now in South America. "Champagne Dick" will be remembered by many LEDGER readers as Dick Kyle of Lewisburg, this county.

One day in the spring of 1884 Mrs. Frederick White of Coventry, N. Y., asked her husband to bring her a sack of flour from a near-by store. He started to do so and that was the last she saw of him until one day last week, when he walked into the house with a sack of flour on his shoulder, saying as he set it down that he had not forgotten the errand. He has been in the far West, has accumulated a good deal of money and will take Mrs. White to his Western home.

It is a singular illustration of the way in which the general belief is sometimes in error that statistics are produced showing the widespread idea that steam has displaced sail power in ocean transportation to be decidedly in error. The fact is that sail power now carries nearly half the world's freights, and a full half of the tonnage of the vessels built last year was composed of sailing vessels. The reason for this return in the direction of sail power is its evident economy.

Major William Starling, a gentleman widely known in Kentucky, died suddenly of heart failure in Greenville, Miss., on December 10th, aged 60. His father, Colonel William Starling, was a native of Franklin county and his mother a daughter of Judge Samuel McDowell of Mercer county, who was President of eight of the nine Conventions held in Kentucky previous to its admission into the Union, and Marshal of the United States District Court of Kentucky from 1789 to 1801. He was a first cousin of the late Major H. C. McDowell of Ashland.
